which users will have to discover. Many others exist for riding to the south. Only a few of the suitable access points have been noted on the map. Many others exist for riding to the south.

The Honey Comb Campground and trailhead located at Hurricane and Enterprise. Sand Hollow State Park has a campground and trailhead purposely built for OHV users. Facilities – Food, fuel and lodging are accessible by OHV from many vantage points are spectacular. Views of the desert can be found in this area including Joshua/yucca and high desert.

Scenery – All of the landscapes typical to southern Utah are represented here including deserts, red rock, pinyon/juniper and alpine forests. Views from many vantage points are spectacular. For some locations, the weather before leaving on a trip.

Elevations – Most of the area can be ridden year-round. There are many areas and routes dangerous to travel. Check the weather before leaving on a trip. Extremely hot summer weather. Summer thunderstorms may make some areas and routes dangerous to travel. Check the weather before leaving on a trip. Shorter, extremely hot summer weather. Summer thunderstorms may make some areas and routes dangerous to travel. Check the weather before leaving on a trip.

Termite Plan, there is little or no signage in the rest of the county. While many of the routes within the Dixie National Forest are restricted to vehicles not exceeding 50 inches in width. For other ATV routes the designation is only a recommendation, although some exceed 50 inches in width. For other ATV routes the designation is only a recommendation, although some exceed 50 inches in width.

Examples – ATV routes shown on the Dixie National Forest are restricted to vehicles not exceeding 90 inches in width. For other ATV routes the designation is only a recommendation, although some exceed 90 inches in width.

Signage – While many of the routes within the Dixie National Forest have OHV signage that corresponds to their travel plan, there is little or no signage in the rest of the county. Some of the higher elevations may be closed during the middle of the winter because of snow. Lower elevations are best ridden from late fall until early spring because of extreme hot summer weather. Summer thunderstorms may make some areas and routes dangerous to travel. Check the weather before leaving on a trip.

If the route may be used. Some of the higher elevations may be closed during the middle of the winter because of snow. Lower elevations are best ridden from late fall until early spring because of extremely hot summer weather. Summer thunderstorms may make some areas and routes dangerous to travel. Check the weather before leaving on a trip.

Selecting a Featured System – There are nearly 340 miles of featured OHV (off-highway vehicle) roads and trails shown on the map. For these routes, information has been recorded about route length, travel time, difficulty, elevation gain, and each has their own restrictions. To determine if the route may be used.

Use of Side-by-Side (SxS) Vehicles – ATV routes shown on the Dixie National Forest are restricted to vehicles not exceeding 90 inches in width. For other ATV routes the designation is only a recommendation, although some exceed 90 inches in width. For other ATV routes the designation is only a recommendation, although some exceed 90 inches in width.